It was plainly perceptible that the chief was dead, and that the groans ame from his unfortunate comrade. They devoted their time to endeavoring to feath and sixteen badly injured, five of whom will die.

A crowd had assembled in Chrisman Brothers' Hail, to attend a Christman time feet was dead, and that the groans are testival. While the festivities were at their fielight, some one climbed on a beach from which to get a better view of what was going on. In so doing, his head struck a lamp hanging from the celling, overturning it. The oil immediately caught fire. Everything being of a dry and inflammable nature, the room was soon a mass of flames. Some one shouled: "Shut the door and keep quiet; it can be put out."

By this time the confusion was so great that people began scrambling in a wild endeavor to reach the door. Women and children were trampled under foot, and as there was only one exit to the hall, and the fire being between the maniority of the crowed and the door, many rushed heading into the flames. TWO FIREMEN'S

"They've been giving him something to drink that's made him so he desn't know anything. There's no use trying to talk to him."

There were some expressions that Chief Bresnan acted wrongly in going to fight the fire from below, but Chief Bonner said that Bresnan had done the same thing a hundred times, and that any fireman might be called on to do the same any day.

Fire Chief Bonner was terribly affected over Chief Bresnan's tragic death, Rooney, who was assistant toreman of Truck 12, was to have been made a foreman to-day.

Recovering the Bodies.

At 9.30 o'clock the firemen began cutting away the beams which held Bresnan and Rooney down. They could see Bresnan's hand and the top of his hat. Up to that time they had seen nothing of Rooney.

The work of recovering the bodies was zealously undertaken by the men, who everted strenuous efforts to secure their dead superior officers.

At about 10.30 o'clock the rescuing party of firemen reached the body of Chief Bresnau, but it was in such a position that it would require an hour to extricate it. One of the hands and part of the head projected from under the heavy tank.

The men who had already worked for hours and were completely covered by a coating of ice, were nearly exhausted, but renewed their efforts with almost superhuman efforts when they heard a groan from the mass of debris.

Mrs. Rooney was prostrated by the brible news. Thirteen-year-old dahmy, a manly little fellow, said this afternoon that he had not heard any of the particulars concerning his father's death. He eagerly read "The Evening World" Extra, which told of the manner in which his father had been killed. The lad read the story through to the end with difficulty, for the big tears would well up into his eyes.

"Pop was a brave man," was his only comment, and then he said he would take the paper to his mother.

This was Booth. That other star, Joe Jefferson, says the Louisville Courier-Journal, is quite another sort of actor in private life. What could you expect? Could Joe Jefferson be awesome. The idea is so impossible that this story, which fluttered from the wings of Macauley's last night, seems almost a matter of course.

This is the story. There are numerous lavenile "supers" in "Rip Van Winkle." One of the smallest of them stood, hat in hand, waiting for his cue. The hat was not wanted in the young histerion's approaching "turn." Suddenly the youngster turned to the nearest bystander with: "Say, there's my cue—hold my hat, will you." my hat, will you? there's my cale most oblighingly until its owner returned, and, looking around him, inquired: "Who took my hat."

I took it." the answer came, and it came from the immortal Jefferson.

Chairman Lexow, who came up at the same moment, went into the room with the Superintendent and they were closeted together for several minutes. When the Chairman came out he said that he did not know whether Supt. Byrnes would be the first witness or not. It was understood last night, he said, that Inspector McLaughlin would be called first to-day, but the plans might be changed.

In regard to the closing of the sessions of the Committee, he said:

"What is that?" said Charles and Charles quickly.

Capt Mariens was the first witness called after Mr. Mott's retirement. He said his wife was not present, and Mr. Goff said he would have to pursue a different line from what he had first intended.

"Why have you kept your wife away?" asked Mr. Goff.

"I didn't know her condition."

"You have been charged with corruption and bribery, and as soon as you found I wanted "our wife you sent her off to Northport."

"She was all right when she went away, but her condition has changed since then."

"I cannot examine you at all." said Mr. Goff, "and I accuse you now of purposely keeping your wife away from the witness stand to save yourself. I am not going through the farce of examining you when I cannot do it my own way."

"I am an honest man," said Martens.

"Yes, I know you will say so, but witnesses have testified that you are corrupt."

Capt. Ryan was recalled while waiting for Inspector McLaughlin, whom Mr. Goff said he had summoned and Mr. Goff was not yet ready to call the Superintendent.

The was another call for Inspector McLaughlin, "Dues any one know where Inspector McLaughlin is?" repeated Mr. Goff, but there was still silence.

"I had the inspector subpoenaed last inght." continued the chief counsel, "and I do not understand why he is not here." The messenger who had been sent out to get him had not returned, and there was a said that Supt. Byrnes was still in the building, although he had not shown himself in the Committee-room since the beginning of the hearing. There was evidently no one present to fill up the gap after Capt, Ryan left the stand, and Mr. Goff was not yet ready to call the Superintendent.

The was another call for Inspector McLaughlin.

The Police Commissioners Answer

His Writ of Certiorari.

The Board of Police Commissioners have made their return to the writ of certiorari obtained by ex-Sergt. Felix McKenna in the Supreme Court. compelling them to review their findings in the trial which resulted in McKenna's dismissal from the police force.

McKenna, through his counsel, claimed McKenna, through his counsel, claimed that only one day elapsed between the filing of the specifications of the charges against him, and the date on which he was ordered to "eport for trial, and that his legal rights had been violated in not granting him a separate trial.

The omnissioners in their return submit copies of the charges against Mo-Kenna and a transcript of the proceedings. The case will be argued before Justice Patterson.
